Married at First Sight By Gu Lingfei is a chinese novel about Serenity Hunt's life. She gets up early to make breakfast for her sister's family before leaving to grab her birth certificate. Serenity makes a promise to her brother-in-law, Zachary, to go dutch with living expenses and other loans. They decide to get married and go through the formalities quickly. Serenity is related to Zachary's family by marriage. She finds it hard to believe that they would stand by her during conflicts between the couple. Zachary's cousin, Callum, asks him about his marriage to Serenity and gets a glare in response. As Serenity left the probing session, she approached Zachary with a knowing smile. "What do I need your cousin for? He has a girlfriend, and it's too late now that the papers are signed! Keep this between us and don't let my sister know; I don't want her to be sad." Jasmine whispered something in response, seemingly amused by Serenity's situation. Zachary, meanwhile, was preparing to leave, instructing his assistant to bring around a new car he had purchased. However, this seemed like an excuse to avoid discussing his wife with someone else. He couldn't recall his wife's name at the moment and decided not to bother digging out the marriage license. Serenity noticed Zachary's concern about his weight and smiled reassuringly. "You're fit, Mr. York." She bid him goodnight before turning to leave, but he called after her, asking her to wait. When she turned back around, he handed her a debit card with the PIN written down. "This is for you; use it to buy things," he explained. Serenity then went to her sister's place and found Liberty busy in the kitchen. They exchanged greetings before Serenity mentioned that she had eaten already.
